This week at Nursery ...

5th May 2023

This week at Next Steps we have been learning about the Royal family. The children have been excited to learn a new Coronation song and have been busy creating union flags and sparkly crowns.

The children showed an interest in the planters at the front of the studio so we enjoyed taking a walk into the woodland to explore what is growing up there. The children had lots of fun blowing dandelion clocks!

Outdoors, the children have been investigating what items float and sink in water, making predictions and testing their theories. We have been finding lots of natural materials and have been surprised at how a really big stick can float but a tiny pebble doesn't.

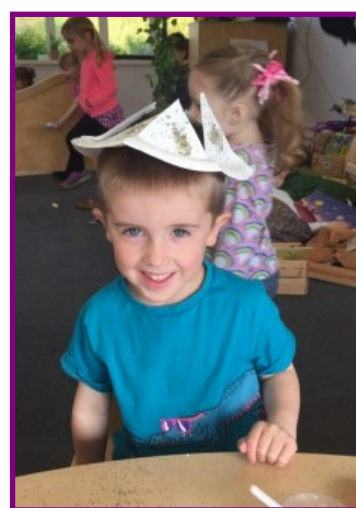

The children have also liked being able to use the reception's wood-working area, learning all about the importance of safety.

We have decided this week to award our Star of the Week to our new King Charles 3rd!

We hope all of our families have a lovely long weekend celebrating this exciting day in British History. We are looking forward to hearing all about it.

September Sessions

Please let us know as soon as possible if you are considering changing, or adding any sessions from September so we can ensure that places are allocated accordingly.
